Subject notes: Daniels was well known in North Carolina for his position as editor of the News and Observer from 1894 to 1948. At the national level, he became a well-known statesman after he served two government jobs; he was the Secretary of the Navy from 1913 to 1921 and served as the ambassador to Mexico from 1933 to 1942.

Controversies: The statue was removed from Nash Square on June 16, 2020. The Daniels family made the request in response to the changing political climate in the country in the wake of the death of George Floyd in Minneapolis and the legacy of Josephus Daniels' racist beliefs and role as a white supremacist supporter of the 1898 racial violence led by white supremacists in Wilmington.

Location: The monument was located in the far right corner of Nash Square near the corner of West Hargett Street and South McDowell Street.

Landscape: There are a few bushes and a medium size tree near the monument. The monument itself is located on the side of the walkway.
