

National Congressional Club <sup>[1]</sup>

National Congressional Club

by Ronnie W. Faulkner, 2006

The National Congressional Club (NCC), originally the Congressional Club of North Carolina and later renamed the Conservative Club, was a political action committee formed by Tom Ellis in 1973 to help retire the campaign debts of U.S. senator Jesse Helms. The club rapidly became a formidable fund-raising and media organization closely identified with Helms and his conservative <sup>[2]</sup> agenda. It also was noteworthy for what critics called "attack ads"-television ads that emphasized presumably negative aspects of an opponent's record.

Tom Ellis (left) and Carter Wren (right) at the National Congressional Club office, November 12, 1979. Copyright News & Observer, all rights reserved. Used with permission. Housed at the N.C. State Archives, call no. NO_18426Fr25.

<sup>[3]</sup>

Under Ellis's leadership and with Carter Wrenn as executive director, the NCC successfully managed a number of campaigns for the U.S. Senate, including Helms's runs in 1978, 1984, and 1990, as well as John East <sup>[4]</sup>'s campaign in 1980 and Lauch Faircloth <sup>[5]</sup>'s in 1992. It is also credited with Ronald Reagan <sup>[6]</sup>'s victory in the 1976 North Carolina GOP primary against incumbent President Gerald Ford <sup>[7]</sup> and raised an estimated $10 million during Reagan's successful 1980 campaign for the presidency.

In the mid-1980s Fairness in Media, a committee of NCC members and allies of Helms, initiated a very public fight to take over the Columbia Broadcasting System in order to promote their political goals. The takeover bid failed but gained a great deal of publicity for Helms and the Congressional Club. In 1993 the NCC supported the first successful twentieth century Republican candidate for mayor of Raleigh, Tom Fetzer, a former staffer for the organization. It was not as successful in other races, notably those for Congress and the governorship.

The NCC had a falling out with Helms in 1993 and had to lay off some staff members and relocate its offices from Raleigh to Franklin County <sup>[8]</sup>. In 1996, calling itself the Conservative Club, it was revitalized and gave a brief boost to the presidential aspirations of millionaire businessman Steve Forbes, a proponent of the flat tax. Forbes won a few early GOP primaries and did some early damage to front-runner Bob Dole <sup>[9]</sup> of Kansas, but the legendary attack ads of the Congressional Club did not have national staying power, and even Forbes started to take a more positive tone before his campaign collapsed.

References:

Rob Christensen, "Forbes' Fabulous Rise Is Conservative Club's Comeback," Raleigh News and Observer, 29 Jan. 1996.

Michael Crowley, "Under a Rock," New Republic (29 Jan. 1996).

Ernest B. Furgurson, Hard Right: The Rise of Jesse Helms (1986).

William D. Snider, Helms and Hunt: The North Carolina Senate Race, 1984 (1985).

John F. Stacks, "The Machine That Jesse Built," Time (14 Sept. 1981).

Image Credits:

Hill, Jackson. Tom Ellis (left) and Carter Wren (right) at the National Congressional Club office, November 12, 1979. Copyright News & Observer, all rights reserved. Used with permission. Housed at the N.C. State Archives, call no. NO_18426Fr25.

Subjects:

Political movements and parties <sup>[10]</sup>

Authors:

Faulkner, Ronnie W. <sup>[11]</sup>

Origin - location:

Franklin County <sup>[12]</sup>

Raleigh <sup>[13]</sup>

From:

Encyclopedia of North Carolina, University of North Carolina Press.<sup>[14]</sup>

1 January 2006 | Faulkner, Ronnie W.

---

Source URL:<https://ncpedia.org/national-congressional-club>

Links

[1] <https://ncpedia.org/national-congressional-club> [2] <https://ncpedia.org/conservatism> [3] <http://www.newsobserver.com/> [4] <http://bioguide.congress.gov/scripts/biodisplay.pl?index=E000017> [5] <http://bioguide.congress.gov/scripts/biodisplay.pl?index=F000437> [6] <https://www.whitehouse.gov/about/presidents/ronaldreagan> [7] <https://www.whitehouse.gov/about/presidents/geraldford> [8] <https://ncpedia.org/geography/franklin> [9] <http://bioguide.congress.gov/scripts/biodisplay.pl?index=D000401> [10] <https://ncpedia.org/category/subjects/political-movemen> [11] <https://ncpedia.org/category/authors/faulkner-ronnie-w> [12] <https://ncpedia.org/category/origin-location/piedmont/f> [13] <https://ncpedia.org/category/origin-location/piedmont-0> [14] <https://ncpedia.org/category/entry-source/encyclopedia->