1826-1925."

^[3]James Bogle, portrait and genre painter, was born in or near Fayetteville ^[4], or in Georgetown, S.C., a twin son of Dr. James and Sarah Auld Bogle. Dr. Bogle made his living both as a physician and as principal and teacher at various academies including the Franklin Academy in Louisburg and Fayetteville Academy ^[5]. James may have attended the latter although of his early education nothing is known. In 1836 he went to New York City where he studied art under Samuel F. B. Morse. By 1838 he was traveling with his twin brother, Robert ^[2], through North Carolina and South Carolina, painting portraits and exhibiting genre paintings. By 1840 they had achieved such prominence as to be described by the Charleston \(S.C.\) Courier ^[6] as the "Siamese Twins of the divine art." They worked in both Charleston and Baltimore during the years between 1841 and 1843. In Baltimore James apparently met Rebecca Riggs, daughter of a prominent businessman, and they were married in New York in January 1843. The young couple established their residence in New York. They became the parents of James, Jr., Rebecca Riggs, Elizabeth, Margaret Riggs, Virginia Waldron, and Aurelia Calhoun. By 1853 Bogle had set up his own school of painting and was widely known as a portraitist, having been elected an associate of the National Academy of Design ^[7] in 1849. Among his works are portraits of John C. Calhoun ^[8], Daniel Webster ^[9], Henry Clay ^[10], and Millard Fillmore ^[11]. His portrait of Judge William Gaston ^[12] is owned by the Philanthropic Society of The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill ^[13]. The New York Atlas ^[14] in 1852 commented that "Bogle, to our mind, is equal to any painter of the times . . . in every department of the art [he] is as high perfection as any man can be; and it is not extravagant to call him the Sir Thomas Lawrence ^[15] of the United States." In 1861 he was elected to the status of Academician of the National Academy of Design. Bogle died in Brooklyn, N.Y., and was buried by his wife in Woodlawn Cemetery in New York.
