^[2]Richard Henry Lewis, physician, teacher, and legislative counselor, the son of Richard Henry and Martha Elizabeth Hoskins Lewis, was born at Greenwreath near Greenville. He attended Owens School and the Tarboro Male Academy ^[3] and entered The University of North Carolina ^[4] in 1866. Until the university closed in 1868, he led his class in scholastic ability. In the fall of that year he entered the University of Virginia ^[5] where his primary studies were philosophy and French, and in the fall of 1869 he began to study medicine. In 1870 he entered the School of Medicine at the University of Maryland ^[6], from which he was graduated on 1 Mar. 1871 with the M.D. degree. He remained in Baltimore for two years as resident and later as assistant physician in the University of Maryland Hospital. Returning to North Carolina, he engaged in general practice in Tarboro for a few months before determining to specialize in the treatment of eye and ear diseases. He began studies under Dr. Julian J. Chisholm in Baltimore and afterwards continued at the Royal Ophthalmic Hospital in London. In 1875 he began a practice in Savannah, Ga.

Finally settling in Raleigh ^[7], Lewis became a member of the North Carolina State Medical Society ^[8] in 1877, the Board of Medical Examiners ^[9] in 1880 (elected president, 1890), the North Carolina State Board of Health in 1885 (secretary, 1892–1909), and the American Public Health Association ^[10] (president, 1908). For thirty-five years he served on the board of trustees of The University of North Carolina and for many years he was a member of the

For twenty-three years he was a trustee and a member of the executive committee of St. Mary's School [12], Raleigh, and for twenty-eight years he worked diligently for the education of blacks, serving as professor of the diseases of the eye and ear in Leonard Medical School [13] of Shaw University [14], Raleigh. For seven years he also was professor of the diseases of the eye and ear in the medical department of The University of North Carolina.

Lewis was influential in securing some of the earliest legislation for the improvement of rural roads, and while chairman of the street committee of the Raleigh Board of Aldermen he was responsible for the use of the first road machine in the city. For many years he was a member of the board of directors and, after 1916, second vice-president of the Citizens National Bank of Raleigh. At Christ Church he was an active member and senior warden.

His first wife was Cornelia Violet Battle [15], whom he married in 1877; she died in 1886 leaving four children: Richard Henry, Martha Battle, Kemp Plummer [16], and Ivey Foreman Lewis. In 1890 he married Mary Long Gordon, who died in 1895 leaving a daughter, Nell [Cornelia] Battle Lewis [17]. His third wife, whom he married in 1897, was Mrs. Annie Blackwell Foreman; she died in 1917. Lewis was buried in Oakwood Cemetery [18], Raleigh.
