Royal Governor Arthur Dobbs, for whom Dobbs County was named.

In 1758 the General Assembly decided that Johnston County <sup>[3]</sup> should be divided and that the newly formed county would be known as Dobbs, in honor of Arthur Dobbs <sup>[4]</sup>, the Royal Governor of the colony of North Carolina. the seat of Dobbs, with the courthouse and its records remaining in tact. Johnston County was given a new seat and courthouse at Hinton's Quarter, closer to the center of the new smaller county. <sup>[5]</sup>ek became

In 1779 Dobbs County was divided and the county seat was moved to Kingston (modern Kinston) where Richard Caswell <sup>[6]</sup>, then Governor of the new state of North Carolina, owned property. Walnut Creek became the seat of the new county of Wayne <sup>[7]</sup>, formed from the western half of Dobbs. The records in the old courthouse, however, moved with the Dobbs County records to Kingston.

Dobbs County, the name a constant reminder of the old regime, was abolished in 1791 and two new counties were formed. They were Lenoir <sup>[8]</sup>, named for William Lenoir <sup>[9]</sup>, speaker of the state senate, and Glasgow, named for James Glasgow <sup>[10]</sup>, Secretary of State. When Glasgow was found guilty of land fraud, the name of that county was changed to Greene <sup>[11]</sup>, in honor of Revolutionary War hero General Nathanael Greene.
