Justina Davis, second wife of Governor Arthur Dobbs, and later wife of Abner Nash, who became governor of North Carolina after her death, was born probably in Brunswick. She is thought to have been the daughter of John Davis and his wife, Rebecca Moore, who was the granddaughter of the second Landgrave Thomas Smith and of Governor James Moore, both of South Carolina. Justina married Governor Dobbs when she was fifteen and he in his seventies. A savage lampoon, purporting to be a letter written by a North Carolinian to a friend in Maryland, indicates the ridicule and scorn aroused by this match:

“Our Old Silenus of the En vigor ated age of Seventy Eight who still Damns this Province with his Baneful Influence grew stupidly enamored with Miss Davis a Lovely Lady of sprightly fifteen of a good Family and some Fortune. After much doting parade, Young Miss (for surely parents know best) is persuaded to be a Governor’s Lady altho she loved and was beloved by Dear Eighteen Y_____g M_____r Q_____n-ce [Quince?] The day is fixed the nuptial feast provided when Lo a Discovery is made which surpasses in Villainy the Description of the most envenomed Satyrist. It is not known who “young Mr. Quince” was, nor if the young pair were indeed engaged to be married. Records indicate that Justina was a dutiful and loving wife to the aged governor. Upon his death at their home, Russellborough, near Brunswick, she wrote to her stepson in Ireland: “I have lost one of the best and tenderest of husbands.”

Justina later married Abner Nash. They lived, it is thought, on King Street (now Main Street) in Halifax, where she bore him three children: Abner, who died young; Margaret, who married Thomas Haslin; and Justina, who died unmarried. Mrs. Nash died at the untimely age of twenty-six and was buried in Halifax, where her tombstone may still be read: “Mrs. Justina Nash / O. B. 6th December An Dom 1771 / in the 25th year of her age.”
