Materials & Techniques: Granite, bronze

Unveiling & Dedication: The memorial to McConnell was said to be a "big event for the courthouse." The ceremony was held on Sunday afternoon April 1, 1917. More than 1,000 people came to show their respect for McConnell, and U.S. Spence, the mayor of Carthage at the time, presided over the ceremony. The Sandhills Quartet performed "Sleep on Brave Heart Forever", and eulogies were given by Mayor Spence, Governor Bickett, Governor Frank Lowden of Illinois, and French Ambassador M. Jusseraud. Letters from around the country were read. A comrade told the story of waiting for and finally hearing the news of his friend McConnell's death. A memorial was held in Paris, France on April 2, 1917, the following day.

Subject notes: Jacques MacConnell (James McConnell) was a citizen of Carthage, N.C. He was a pilot for the American Military who enlisted in the French Army in 1915 and flew in the Lafayette Escadrille. On March 19, 1917 he was killed over France during an air battle with German fighter planes. Today he is celebrated annually in Carthage on Memorial Day. He is also honored in Carthage by the Jacques McConnell Memorial [4].

Location: The monument sits in front of the historic Moore County Courthouse in Courthouse Square between the sidewalk and the traffic circle. It sits on the McReynolds Street side of the square.

Landscape: The monument sits in the lawn in front of the courthouse, surrounded by trees and shrubbery. There are two canon that sit on either side of the monument, both mounted on stone. They face away from the court house.
