

Languages and Nationalities ^[1]

To give you a sense of the diversity of twenty-first century North Carolina, we've provided two lists of languages below.

1. The first is from the U.S. Census of 2000, and it shows the number of people aged 5 and over who spoke various languages at home -- that is, as a first or native language.
2. The second is from the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction; this table shows the number of students in North Carolina schools who spoke various languages at home in 2005.

Finally, for a historical perspective, we've provided similar data from antebellum North Carolina.
