

Capitol of the State of Franklin

Capitol of the State of Franklin

The replica of the capitol building of the short-lived State of Franklin, in Greeneville, Tennessee. On August 23, 1784 Franklin separated from North Carolina and gained sovereignty. The state was made of eight counties and drafted their own Declaration of Independence in December 1784. With inner conflict between Franklin politicians and issues with the Cherokee, Franklin was absorbed into North Carolina in 1788. Eight years later the former state became part of Tennessee, where it remains today.

The description of the historical marker for the capitol building reads "This is a replica of the building which is believed to have served as the capitol of the State of Franklin from 1785 until 1788 and which originally stood near the intersection of Main and Depot Streets. At constitutional conventions held there, competing proposals engendered bitter controversy and resulted in the first political pamphlets produced west of the Appalachians. Chief protagonists were three Presbyterian clergymen, Rev. Samuel Houston, Rev. William Graham, and Rev. Hezekiah Balch. The Franklin Legislature, which also met there, challenged the authority of North Carolina by passing laws to levy taxes, raise a militia, establish courts, authorize the performance of marriages, and open a land office." -Written by the Tennessee Historical Commission

For more about the State of Franklin visit: <https://constitutioncenter.org/blog/on-this-day-the-state-of-franklin-st...>

<http://www.tnhistoryforkids.org/history/virtual-tours/virtual-tours/stat...>

Citation (Chicago Style):

Emerson, Jimmy. State of Franklin Capitol. 2007. Digital Image. Flickr. <https://www.flickr.com/photos/auvet/491853081/> (Accessed December 31, 2018).

Available at:

<https://www.flickr.com/photos/auvet/491853081/>

Read the related article:

Primary Source: The State of Franklin

Usage Statement:

Creative Commons BY-NC-SA

This item has a Creative Commons license for re-use. This Creative Commons BY-NC-SA license means that you may use, remix, tweak, and build upon the work for non-commercial purposes as long as you credit the original creator and as long as you license your new creation using the same license. For more information about Creative Commons licensing <sup>[1]</sup> and a link to the license, see full details at <https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-sa/4.0/> <sup>[2]</sup>.

---

Source URL:<https://ncpedia.org/media/capitol-state-franklin>

Links

[1] <https://creativecommons.org/licenses/> [2] <https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-sa/4.0/>