

Franklin Roosevelt

Franklin Roosevelt

In 1933 the new president, Franklin D. Roosevelt, brought an air of confidence and optimism that quickly rallied the people to the banner of his program, known as the New Deal. "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself," the president declared in his inaugural address to the nation.

This photograph displays President Franklin in 1933.

Citation (Chicago Style):

Goldensky, Elias, photographer. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, head-and-shoulders portrait, facing slightly left , ca. 1933. Dec 27. Photograph. <https://www.loc.gov/item/96523441/>.

Read the related article: Roosevelt and the New Deal

Usage Statement:

Public Domain

Public Domain is a copyright term that is often used when talking about copyright for creative works. Under U.S. copyright law, individual items that are in the public domain are items that are no longer protected by copyright law. This means that you do not need to request permission to re-use, re-publish or even change a copy of the item. Items enter the public domain under U.S. copyright law for a number of reasons: the original copyright may have expired; the item was created by the U.S. Federal Government or other governmental entity that views the things it creates as in the public domain; the work was never protected by copyright for some other reason related to how it was produced (for example, it was a speech that wasn't written down or recorded); or the work doesn't have enough originality to make it eligible for copyright protection.

