Arthur Dobbs (1689–1765)

Arthur Dobbs (1689–1765) was royal governor of North Carolina from 1754 to 1764. Note the globe and ship in the behind Dobb, and the map of North Carolina (viewer's right) and compass (viewer's left) in each hand.

Dobbs was born in Ayrshire Scotland, 1689. In the 1710s Dobbs moved to Ireland to manage the family's estate there. In Carrickfergus, Ireland 1733 he was mayor, High Sherrif of the county, Antrim, and a member of the Irish Parliament. Dobbs' interest in colonial governorship and improving the British Empire granted him the position as governor of North Carolina twenty years later. The next year Dobbs traveled to the colony. As governor Dobbs encouraged, unity, industry, a strong military, loyalty to England, and the Anglican Church. He also tried to make "Tower Hill", Dobbs' plantation, in Kingston (today, Kinstong) North Carolina's capitol. But, his efforts were blocked by the British government. Dobbs became unpopular in the 1760s with his handling of financial problems. In 1765, Dobbs was planning on returning to Ireland, but died before his departure. William Tryon succeeded Dobbs.

Usage Statement:

Public Domain

Public Domain is a copyright term that is often used when talking about copyright for creative works. Under U.S. copyright law, individual items that are in the public domain are items that are no longer protected by copyright law. This means that you do not need to request permission to re-use, re-publish or even change a copy of the item. Items enter the public domain under U.S. copyright law for a number of reasons: the original copyright may have expired; the item was created by the U.S. Federal Government or other governmental entity that views the things it creates as in the public domain; the work was never protected by copyright for some other reason related to how it was produced (for example, it was a speech that wasn't written down or recorded); or the work doesn't have enough originality to make it eligible for copyright protection.
