

Convention of 1835 <sup>[1]</sup>

Convention of 1835

by John L. Humber, 2006; Revised October 2022.

See also: "1835 Constitutional Convention <sup>[2]</sup>" from the Tar Heel Junior Historian; State Constitution <sup>[3]</sup>; Black and Tan Constitution <sup>[4]</sup>; Convention of 1868 <sup>[5]</sup>; Convention of 1875 <sup>[6]</sup>; Governor <sup>[7]</sup>.

Cover. 1835. Journal of the Convention, Called by the Freemen of North-Carolina, to Amend the Constitution of the State, Which Assembled in the City of Raleigh, on the 4th of June, 1835, and Continued in Session Until the 11th Day of July Thereafter.

<sup>[8]</sup>The constitutional convention of 1835 was convened to modify the North Carolina Constitution of 1776 <sup>[3]</sup>. Some provisions of the 1776 document were rooted in the colonial experience, and a growing segment of the population came to consider them impediments to an emerging nineteenth-century democratic society, with its developing systems of education, economy, and internal improvements <sup>[9]</sup>. Efforts to revise the 1776 constitution began shortly after the Revolutionary War <sup>[10]</sup> and continued periodically until a convention was convened in 1835, when the strong east-west sectionalism over the issues was finally overcome.

The principal changes effected by the 1835 convention involved the election process, including voter qualifications and rules for legislative apportionment. One modification was a shift from annual to biennial elections and sessions of the General Assembly. The composition of the State House of Representatives continued to be based on the county unit system, which guaranteed each county at least 1 representative and permitted a maximum of 120 throughout the state. The 1776 voter qualification of taxpaying "freemen," which still excluded women, was retained to elect state representatives. However, free blacks who had been previously allowed to vote were now disfranchised. The "federal population," which included three-fifths of the formerly enslaved people, was used to calculate the apportionment of the remaining representatives beyond the one-per-county guarantee. "Borough" representation, a remnant of the English system, which granted a special representative to towns of commercial importance, was eliminated. Edenton, New Bern, Wilmington, Salisbury, Hillsborough, Halifax, and Fayetteville, previously designated as "borough towns" <sup>[11]</sup>, no longer enjoyed this privilege.

The basis of representation for the North Carolina Senate was changed from a county to a district unit formulated according to the state tax base. A maximum of 50 senators was prescribed, but property ownership was retained as a qualification to vote. None of the existing 65 counties was to be divided in forming the senatorial districts.

The governor, previously elected annually by the legislature, would now be chosen biennially by the same voters who elected the state representatives. This marked the beginning of modern political campaigning, as gubernatorial candidates sought the statewide support of the voting public for the first time. The change also removed the governor's office from a position of almost total subservience to the General Assembly <sup>[12]</sup>.

The 1835 constitutional convention also extended the religious qualification for holding state office to include not only Protestants but also all other Christians, instituted an impeachment process for state officers, imposed some limitations on the General Assembly in passing private legislation, and developed a procedure for amending the state constitution in the future.

References:

Henry Groves Connor, "The Convention of 1835," North Carolina Booklet 8 (October 1908). Online at DocSouth at <https://docsouth.unc.edu/nc/connor08/menu.html> <sup>[13]</sup>

Harold J. Counihan, "The North Carolina Constitutional Convention of 1835: A Study in Jacksonian Democracy," NCHR 46 (October 1969).

Fletcher M. Green, Constitutional Development in the South Atlantic States, 1776-1860 (1930).

John V. Orth, The North Carolina State Constitution with History and Commentary (1993).

Additional resources:

North Carolina Constitutional Convention. 1835. Journal of the Convention, Called by the Freemen of North-Carolina, to Amend the Constitution of the State, Which Assembled in the City of Raleigh, on the 4th of June, 1835, and Continued in Session Until the 11th Day of July Thereafter. Raleigh: J. Gales and Son. Online at DocSouth at <https://docsouth.unc.edu/nc/conv1835/menu.html> <sup>[8]</sup>.

Image credit:

"Cover." 1835. Journal of the Convention, Called by the Freemen of North-Carolina, to Amend the Constitution of the State, Which Assembled in the City of Raleigh, on the 4th of June, 1835, and Continued in Session Until the 11th Day of July Thereafter. Raleigh: J. Gales and Son. Online at DocSouth at <https://docsouth.unc.edu/nc/conv1835/menu.html> <sup>[8]</sup>. Accessed 06/05/2012.

Subjects:

Antebellum (1820-1861) <sup>[14]</sup>

Discrimination <sup>[15]</sup>

Politics and government <sup>[16]</sup>

Authors:

Humber, John L. <sup>[17]</sup>

From:

Encyclopedia of North Carolina. University of North Carolina Press. <sup>[18]</sup>

1 January 2006 | Humber, John L.

---

Source URL: <https://ncpedia.org/government/convention-1835>

Links

[1] <https://ncpedia.org/government/convention-1835> [2] <https://ncpedia.org/1835-constitutional-convention> [3] <https://ncpedia.org/government/nc-constitution-history> [4] <https://ncpedia.org/black-and-tan-constitution> [5] <https://ncpedia.org/government/convention-1868> [6] <https://ncpedia.org/government/convention-1875> [7] <https://ncpedia.org/government/governorship> [8] <https://docsouth.unc.edu/nc/conv1835/menu.html> [9] <https://ncpedia.org/internal-improvements-0> [10] <https://ncpedia.org/american-revolution> [11] <https://ncpedia.org/borough-towns> [12] <https://ncpedia.org/general-assembly> [13] <https://docsouth.unc.edu/nc/connor08/menu.html> [14] <https://ncpedia.org/category/subjects/antebellum-1820-1> [15] <https://ncpedia.org/category/subjects/race-discrimination> [16] <https://ncpedia.org/category/subjects/politics-and-gove> [17] <https://ncpedia.org/category/authors/humber-john-l> [18] <https://ncpedia.org/category/entry-source/encyclopedia->