

wattle and daub ^[1]

Type of Speech:

noun ^[2]

Definition:

a method of constructing buildings in which vertical wooden stakes or branches are woven with horizontal branches and sticks, and then plastered together with clay or mud. The interwoven branches are known as "wattle," and the clay or mud is known as "daub."

Source URL: <https://ncpedia.org/glossary/wattle-and-daub>

Links

[1] <https://ncpedia.org/glossary/wattle-and-daub> [2] <https://ncpedia.org/category/parts-speech/noun>