

Precincts ^[1]

Precincts

by Lindley S. Butler, 2006

Precincts exist in North Carolina as voting district subdivisions of both cities ^[2] and counties ^[3]. In the Proprietary province of Carolina, however, precincts were administrative and judicial districts of the counties or colonies ^[4]. Corresponding to the modern county, each Proprietary precinct-governed by a court of justices chaired by a steward-had a sheriff ^[5] as its chief law officer. The precincts also were used in determining representation in the Assembly ^[6] and organizing the militia ^[7]. Since the colonial Assembly first met in 1665, precincts may have been established at that time, but the earliest documentation is a 1668 commission that confirms that Pasquotank ^[8] Precinct was in existence. It is likely that Chowan ^[9], Currituck ^[10], and Perquimans ^[11] Precincts were created at the same time. These four governmental units are North Carolina's oldest extant counties.
