The Cherochala Skyway <sup>[15]</sup> passes through the Cherokee <sup>[16]</sup> and Nantahala National Forest <sup>[17]</sup>s (for which it is named), extending 36 miles between the mountains of North Carolina and Tennessee. The dream of what would become North Carolina's most expensive highway at $100 million began in 1958, when hundreds of horseback riders and dozens of covered wagons traveled from Tennessee to Murphy, N.C., in an organized wagon train event that thereafter was celebrated annually. After several setbacks, the highway officially opened in 1996, connecting Tellico Plains, Tenn., and Robbinsville, N.C. The Cherochala Skyway is popular among motorcyclists, car enthusiasts, and tourists in search of breathtaking natural scenery.
