James, Hinton

by Anita Bryant James, 1988

24 Apr. 1884–3 Nov. 1948

Hinton James, businessman and congressman, was born in Richmond ^[2] (now Scotland ^[3]) County, the son of Alexander Long and Mary Patterson James. He was the great-grandson of Hinton James ^[4], the first student at The University of North Carolina ^[5]. In 1896, when the university observed its centennial, eleven-year-old Hinton attended; fifty years later, at the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary, he delivered an address.

After attending Davidson College ^[6], James farmed and engaged in buying and selling produce, particularly watermelons and cantaloupes; he was also a cotton merchant and had banking interests. As a widely known sportsman he hunted, raised prizewinning dogs, and served as state commissioner of game and inland fisheries (1941–45). James was elected as a Democrat ^[7] to complete the unexpired term of Congressman William C. Hammer ^[8] from 4 Nov. 1930 to 3 Mar. 1931; he was not a candidate for another term.

He married Anita Bryant of Laurinburg, and they were the parents of five children: Mary Wall, Anita Bryant, Eliza Patterson, Alice Long, and Hinton, Jr. James was buried in Laurinburg.
