

Lovick, John ^[1]

Lovick, John

by William S. Price, Jr., 1991; Revised by SLNC Government and Heritage Library, December 2022

d. 2 Nov. 1733

See also: Lovick, Thomas ^[2]

Image of John Lovick's signature on a counterfeit 20 shilling bill, circa 1722-1729. Item H.1974.41.3 from the North Carolina Museum of History. Used courtesy of the North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources.

^[3]John Lovick, colonial official, entered North Carolina early in 1713 in the company of Governor Edward Hyde ^[4]. William Byrd, in his Secret History of the Dividing Line ^[5], noted that Lovick had been Hyde's valet. Byrd described Lovick as a merry, good humored man and probably was referring to his profession when he called him "Shoebrush" in the Secret History.

Whatever his origins, Lovick made a sizable place for himself in North Carolina politics and society. At some time around 1720, Governor Charles Eden ^[6] appointed him to the Proprietary Council, where he also served broken terms during the administrations of George Burrington ^[7] and Sir Richard Everard ^[8] (1723–25). Lovick was a delegate in the lower house of the General Assembly ^[9] in 1731 and secretary of the province in 1719, 1721–23, and 1729. During the latter year he estimated his annual income from the office to be £582. Among other appointments he held in the Proprietary years were those of vice-admiralty court judge (1722) and boundary commissioner with the Virginia survey (1728).

By far the most interesting facet of Lovick's career revolved around his relationship with George Burrington ^[10] while the latter was royal governor. As late as August 1729, Burrington numbered Lovick among his enemies. However, because of Lovick's own efforts as well as Sir Richard Everard ^[8]'s complaints about his former secretary, Burrington began to change his opinion. On 26 July 1731, he named Lovick to the royal Council ^[11] as part of his strategy to expel Edmund Porter ^[12] from that body. Lovick soon became the governor's closest ally and consistently voted as Burrington desired. Burrington later justified his appointment of Lovick to the Council ^[11] by praising his services as a legislator and his extensive knowledge of Indian affairs.

In 1732 Lovick became embroiled in a series of events growing out of attempts by certain officials to blunt Burrington's power. For a brief period that year the governor made his ally both chief justice and surveyor general of the colony. The former appointment particularly nettled Burrington's opponents, who argued that Lovick was unskilled in the law. By early 1733 the governor was openly praising Lovick as his best councillor and the only person who could effectively convey executive concerns to the lower house.

When Lovick died, Burrington's already deteriorating relations with the General Assembly worsened. Lovick had written a will in 1727 naming Richard Everard ^[13] as one of his beneficiaries. On his deathbed, however, he declared his wish that all of his property pass to his wife, the former Penelope Galland. Although Lovick had listed two plantations in Chowan County ^[14] and several people whom he enslaved in his 1727 will, Burrington stated in 1734 that he had died heavily in debt. Lovick had no children, but his brother Thomas ^[2] continued a long service in the colonial government.

References:

William S. Price, Jr., "A Strange Incident in George Burrington's Royal Governorship," North Carolina Historical Review 51 (Spring 1974).

William L. Saunders, ed., Colonial Records of North Carolina, vols. 2–3 (1886).

Will of John Lovick (North Carolina State Archives, Raleigh).

Additional Resources:

Byrd, William. William Byrd's histories of the dividing line betwixt Virginia and North Carolina. Raleigh : North Carolina Historical Commission. 1929. <https://archive.org/details/williambyrdshist00byrd> [5] (accessed June 24, 2014).

Image Credits:

"[Counterfeit 20 shilling bill on North Carolina], Accession #: H.1974.41.3 [3]." 1722-1729. North Carolina Museum of History. (accessed June 24, 2014).

Subjects:

Biographies [15]

Colonial period \(1600-1763\) [16]

Public officials [17]

Authors:

Price, William S., Jr. [18]

Origin - location:

Chowan County [19]

From:

Dictionary of North Carolina Biography, University of North Carolina Press. [20]

1 January 1991 | Price, William S., Jr.

Source URL: <https://ncpedia.org/biography/lovick-john>

Links

[1] <https://ncpedia.org/biography/lovick-john> [2] <https://ncpedia.org/biography/lovick-thomas> [3] <http://collections.ncdcr.gov/RediscoveryProficioPublicSearch/ShowItem.aspx?46883+> [4] <https://ncpedia.org/biography/hyde-edward> [5] <https://archive.org/details/williambyrdshist00byrd> [6] <https://ncpedia.org/biography/eden-charles> [7] <https://ncpedia.org/biography/burrington-george> [8] <https://ncpedia.org/biography/everard-sir-richard> [9] <https://ncpedia.org/general-assembly> [10] <https://ncpedia.org/burrington-george> [11] <https://ncpedia.org/council-state> [12] <https://ncpedia.org/biography/porter-edmund> [13] <https://ncpedia.org/everard-richard> [14] <https://ncpedia.org/geography/chowan> [15] <https://ncpedia.org/category/subjects/biography-term> [16] <https://ncpedia.org/category/subjects/colonial-period> [17] <https://ncpedia.org/category/subjects/public-officials> [18] <https://ncpedia.org/category/authors/price-jr-william-s> [19] <https://ncpedia.org/category/origin-location/coastal-38> [20] <https://ncpedia.org/category/entry-source/dictionary-no>