Returning to Fayetteville as a battle-scarred veteran of twenty-one, Shepherd taught briefly at an academy in Louisburg, but in 1868 he began teaching in City College, Baltimore. In 1875 he became superintendent of the Baltimore public schools, and after seven years he was named president of the College of Charleston <sup>[9]</sup> in South Carolina. Under his administration the years between 1882 and 1897 saw what came to be regarded as "the renaissance of the College of Charleston." During his summer vacations, Shepherd taught in colleges and universities in Vermont, Massachusetts, New York, and North Carolina.

Leaving Charleston in 1897, Shepherd settled in Baltimore to spend the remainder of his life in literary and historical research and in writing and lecturing. He was the author of History of the English Language <sup>[10]</sup>, Life of Robert Edward Lee <sup>[11]</sup>, Narrative of Prison Life at Baltimore and Johnson's Island, Ohio <sup>[3]</sup>, An Historical Reader for the Use of Classes in Academies, High Schools, and Grammar Schools <sup>[12]</sup>, Historical Readings for the Use of Teachers' Reading Circles <sup>[13]</sup>, and A Commentary Upon Tennyson's In Memoriam <sup>[14]</sup>. The latter was prepared with the assistance of Alfred, Lord Tennyson, himself. In addition, he edited a history of Baltimore, prepared a study of Edgar Allan Poe, and contributed multiple entries to the New English Dictionary published by the Oxford University Press. His articles appeared in scholarly, popular, and religious journals throughout the United States and in Great Britain. Shepherd once estimated that he had published over eight hundred articles. He was an active member of many professional and scholarly organizations.

There is no record that Shepherd ever received an earned degree, but Lafayette College in Easton, Pa., awarded him an honorary master's degree, and Davidson College and The University of North Carolina <sup>[15]</sup> in 1883 each granted him honorary doctor of laws degrees. An ardent Presbyterian <sup>[16]</sup> churchman, he often spoke at church gatherings. He was a Democrat <sup>[17]</sup> but apparently took no part in political activities, and he is not known to have had any interest in sports.

On 25 June 1867 he married Kate MacGregor Goodridge of Norfolk, Va. They became the parents of two sons and one daughter. Shepherd died and was buried in Baltimore.
