<sup>[2]</sup>Manly Wade Wellman, writer, was born in Angola, West Africa, the son of Frederick Creighton, a medical officer, and Lydia Jeanette Isely Wellman. In 1926 he was graduated from Wichita Municipal University in Kansas (now Wichita State University <sup>[3]</sup>) and in 1927 received a bachelor of laws degree from Columbia University <sup>[4]</sup>. From 1927 to 1934 he was a reporter for the Wichita Beacon and Eagle before embarking on a successful, lifelong career as a free-lance writer. In 1947 he moved to Pinebluff, N.C., but soon settled in Chapel Hill to take advantage of the resources of The University of North Carolina <sup>[5]</sup> library.

Wellman wrote both fiction and nonfiction for periodicals of many types including mystery, sports, juvenile, scholarly, and general popular magazines. His numerous books were also varied: biography, history (particularly Civil War and local history), folklore <sup>[6]</sup>, murder, science fiction, travel, and animals, among others. In 1955 he was the recipient of the Edgar Allan Poe Award <sup>[7]</sup> for nonfiction by the Mystery Writers of America, and in 1978 he was given the North Carolina Award <sup>[8]</sup> for literature.

He taught classes in creative writing in the Evening College of The University of North Carolina <sup>[5]</sup> and was widely appreciated for the aid he extended to would-be writers. He read and commented on their efforts and patiently guided many of them to fruitful careers.

In 1930 he married Frances Obrist, and they had a son, Wade. Wellman was a Democrat, an Episcopalian, and an active member of folklore and historical organizations.
